Annevoie, an 18th century industrial site (foundry) whose owner created a large artificial canal/reservoir at the highest point of his site and used it as source of water for both the foundry and the fountains of his pleasure garden, once rivalling Villa d'Este. These waterworks are presently being restored by a new owner, in view of having the canal feeding again the entire set of waterworks. The photos were taken on a half day tour by the president and the members of Europa Nostra Belgium to the Annevoie Estate (mansion and gardens under restoration), following its General Assembly.
